

I was born in Tripoli, Libya, where the sky and sea are really blue, art was my daily life style, I still sense it through the smell of oil paints and the sound of pencils scratching boards and papers.

My mother was teaching art, and so was my uncle making a living selling his paintings, my father remains my inspiration, he planted in me the sense of creativity and teased my curiosity to always defy my imagination limits. Being a telecom engineering bachelor didn't consume my passion to art, but it consolidated my discipline and commitment to perfect my artistic endeavors.

While studying the Sines and Cosines, curves and vectors were my tools in graphic design, that was my translation of my thoughts into the creative space, seeing my surrounding through color palettes and compositions, yet photography was a better expression to my creativity.

The creative chain would not be complete without a story linking every part of it, framing it into an integral picture, taking all my skills to a more interactive spectrum, telling stories through making films.
